Migrant Project Explained

A language coordinator for this state's Migrant Education Project, along with several Commonwealth Service Corpsmen, will demonstrate for an Andover audience tonight how Spanish-speaking laborers are being tutored in English at nearby farms.

The open meeting, sponsored by the Project's community commission, will be held at 7:30 p.m. at Peabody House, Phillips Academy.

Mrs. Maria Reyes, who is language coordinator for the Project, will role-play with the Corpsmen a typical tutoring session. Mrs. Reyes is a native of Puerto Rico, but has lived in Massachusetts for nine years. This is her third year with the Service Corps and her eighth in work with migrant laborers. During the past winter, she taught and supervised teachers working in the Lowell public school system's new program, English as a Second Language. She has taught previously at John J. Williams School in Boston and at a Puerto Rican University.

The community commission, an arm of the Migrant Education Project, serves as a vital link between residents of a community, migrants in the area and farmers to employ seasonal labor. Some members of the present commission are: Rev. Allyn Bradford, state chairman, Migrant Ministry, Massachusetts Council of Churches, Father Paul Keyes, curate St. Robert Bellarmine Church, Paul Cronin, Mrs. James Wilson, Mrs. Dorothy Gulezian and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Haefling all of Andover; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Mascola of North Andover; and Mr. and Mrs. David Lawrence of Tewksbury.

Anyone interested in the migrant farm laborers now residing in our area is urged to attend.

Warning Issued

Industrial Planning Is Vital

Unless Andover wants to see a "hodgepodge" of industrial development along routes 93 and 495, it must plan now for a pattern of growth that will be beneficial rather than destructive.

This was the warning delivered to the Andover Chamber of Commerce last week by Lt. Gov. Francis W. Sargent, keynote speaker at the organization's annual meeting.

Pointing out that Massachusetts, and particularly the Merrimack Valley, are "blessed with unique natural beauty and a heritage that is the pride of a nation . . .", Sargent asked . . . "in our rush to industrial development, can we preserve that beauty and perpetuate that heritage?"

Answering his own query, the Lieutenant Governor said, "I know we can - using the tool of planning: cooperative, intelligent, enlightened planning that cuts across parochial interest and artificial boundaries set up by individual communities."

"To do the job, we must have uniform zoning and construction by-laws and regulations," he said, "and above all, we must have the will to control industrial development in order to build the kind of Massachusetts that we have been and can be proud of."

Awards

During the annual meeting, Chamber awards were presented to Stafford A. Lindsay, Alexander Y. Milne and Harold T. King.

Lindsay received the Award of Merit in recognition of his volunteer work for numerous Andover and Greater Lawrence groups. Presented to Milne was the President's Award for his work as chairman of the ACC retail committee; and King, who is chairman of the Andover planning board, received the organization's Community Service Award.

Presentation of a check for $1402 was made to Chairman Philip K. Allen of the Board of Selectmen. It represented the sum raised by the Chamber to match the $1000 appropriated by the last Town Meeting for the beautification of Main Street. This project is already underway.

George E. Heseltine was installed at the dinner meeting as president of the Andover Chamber and along with him, these additional officers: Joseph B. Doherty, vice president; Atty. Thomas W. Tavenner, secretary; Rev. James A. Wenzel OSA, treasurer; and Robert W. Henderson, William Doyle, David B. Woodworth and Dr. Richard T. Secord, directors.

Presiding at the annual affair, held at Sheraton Rolling Green Motor Inn, was Eugene A. Bernardin Jr., retiring president. Members of his executive board were introduced and included Vartkes Shigian, vice president; Mary Ann Bonelli, secretary, who was also chairman of the committee for the annual meeting; and Paul J. McVey, treasurer.

The invocation was offered by Rev. Paul T. Keyes of St. Robert Bellarmine Church and Town Manager Richard J. Bowen brought the official greetings of the town. The audience was entertained by the Andover High School Chorus with Miss Patricia McDowell as soloist and Keith Gould directing.

Change
In his discussion of potential industrial growth, Lt. Gov. Sargent pointed out that while people frequently cause change, super highways force it.

He went on to say that because of its proximity to Routes 93 and 495, "Andover is changing, must change and should change to come to grips with the new realities of a new era."

But, he warned, change can mean loss, waste and destruction. Pointing out that the two major highways circling Andover can be "great weapons in your fight for new industry, Sargent at the same time urged the Chamber to take care that the weapons do not backfire.

"What 93 and 495 do for industry," Sargent said, "depends on what industry is going to do to 93 and 495." The challenge, he added, is to control industrial expansion of the area in such a way as to prevent destruction of the area's unique character and natural beauty.

Summer Colds

In itself, a cold is not serious, if it's not neglected. Man, after all, has been getting colds—and recovering from them—for millennia.

But medical science has not yet found a cure for the cold. There's only relief and protection from complications.

So one first step that is recommended, is to seek your pharmacist's advice for a proven preparation which will provide relief if taken at the first sign of symptoms. If the symptoms seem unusually severe, a physician should be consulted.

There are other precautions that you can take to prevent complication. Drink lots of juices to combat the drying out process that colds cause. Eat in moderation—and get as much rest as possible.

A Vacation Plan

Summer Town Meetings are never received with enthusiasm.

The turnout is frequently poor because a great many Andover residents are affluent enough to spend the hot weather weeks away from town. And those who remain are seldom in the frame of mind to wrestle with serious decisions.

But the volume of municipal business in this community has grown to such an extent that it is virtually impossible to anticipate every eventuality and time all matters of import for consideration in March.

Consequently, special Town Meetings are becoming an annual habit, in spite of their shortcomings.

We have one facing us now, on August 28.

Each time voters meet to decide the fate of a school construction proposal, the TOWNSMAN warns that the impending decision is a vital one. And it always is, because the town is never quite abreast of the demand for classroom space.

The vote on the Bancroft School is particularly vital because the five elementary schools we have are already overflowing, spilling their excess into an antiquated building that provides few of the physical requisites for a modern educational program. Delays only compound the problem.

People with vacations scheduled for the week of Town Meeting may not find it easy to answer the Selectmen's call. Some may find it impossible. But every citizen interested in the educational program of the public schools should make it his business to be in Andover on Aug. 28 if he can possibly do so - even if it is inconvenient.

It has been suggested already that the date should be changed, pushed off until after Labor Day when the vacationers return. But time is too valuable for this proposal to be taken seriously. Construction projects always take longer than estimated so the only thing that makes sense is to award the bid and get on with it. The possibility that Town Meeting may require some changes in the proposal must also be considered. Obviously the only change in the date for Town Meeting that should be contemplated is one that would set it forward.

Meanwhile vacationers should keep abreast of developments and arrange to adjust whatever plans they can.

After all, there is nothing in the Constitution which guarantees a democracy that will function to the benefit of the majority without ever inconveniencing its citizens.

Compact Comment

The TOWNSMAN has contended on more than one occasion that parking lots need not be abominations, barren asphalt wastelands.

The Andover Savings Bank is to be commended for proving it. The bank took some criticism months ago when it announced plans for demolition of one of the town's lesser historic houses to make way for much needed customer parking.

It deserves credit now for handling its parking problem with taste.

What Our Readers Say

To the Editor of the TOWNSMAN
Because the town is regularly buying school buildings, it is timely to remind the office of selectmen that the contract should go to the lowest responsible bidder; that should also determine the designer.

It is hoped that at the next town meeting the selectman shall have on hand concerning the proposed Bancroft School, 1) Cost per cubic foot, 2) Cost per square foot, 3) Cost per pupil and 4) the proportion of enclosed cubic space within 9' of flooring and used to the total space which must be heated, cooled and otherwise serviced, and maintained.

The figures for the selectman's proposed school should be compared to those of such successful school designers and builders as Butler Mfg. Co. of Kansas City, Missouri and the U. S. Steel Corp. of Pittsburgh, Penn.

The latter has "Corten Steel".

It never needs painting. That is an advantage over wood plank, brick or concrete.

The selectmen need only to send a copy of the school dept's specifications to the president of either concern to receive a prompt response.

Architect Warner's Bancroft Creation (June 15 Townsman) the referred to as contemporary, is mostly a rehash of Tudor appurtenances, it appears too expensive for Andover's pocket book and needs.

Moreover it is elementary that means be not so different that they distract from the work they are supposed to facilitate.

Incidentally, no provision appears for such a useful arrangement as loading buses under cover, that suggests that other useful arrangements may have been overlooked during the effort to be different rather than economical and useful.

It is also hoped town meeting shall not be presented with what is mostly a fact accomplished. That is as unreliable as presenting it with vagueness in depth.

Sleep Researched

Do Newborn Infants Dream?

If a dog dreams he is likely seeing a juicy bone, a cat might dream of a mouse, but about what could a newborn human infant be dreaming?

These are just some of the provocative questions raised by research now underway on sleep and dreaming. Man has almost always been mystified and frightened by sleep and dreaming. Scientists have been trying to replace folklore with facts for years, but only with the development of the electroencephalograph (EEG) which permits the study of brain waves have these studies become productive.

The EEG and other new instruments made many observations possible, but scientists didn't know how to interpret what they were finding in human volunteers. Using the same techniques with such animals as monkeys and cats, they were able both to extend their work into areas impossible with human volunteers and to interpret their findings in humans.

According to the National Society for Medical Research, such studies in animals and humans are shedding light not only on sleep itself, but on such areas of mental health as personality, behavior and the effects of certain drugs.

There are several different stages in the course of a night's sleep. The EEG shows that most of these stages, with slow brain wave activity, can be classified as quiet. There is one stage, however, in which the brain wave activity is so strong that from the EEG alone it is hard to tell this stage from the waking state. Because this stage is marked by rapid eye movements, it is called REM sleep.

By waking volunteers it was found that dreaming always took place in REM sleep. Some dreams may occur in other stages of sleep, but the most vivid dreams occur during REM sleep, and this stage is always accompanied by dreams.

If volunteers - or animals - were prevented from dreaming for one or two nights, they made up for it by spending much more time in REM sleep when they were not awakened. When humans were awakened each time they showed signs of going into REM sleep, they became irritable and showed signs of personality changes.

Aside from the danger of producing irreversible changes, humans are not really very good subjects in this kind of experiment, because they are suggestible; they might react differently simply because they are being watched. Cats, which don't care who watches them sleep, have helped establish much of what is known in this field.

The French scientist, Michel Jouvet, as well as workers in this country, deprived cats of REM sleep for long periods of time. Even though the animals made up the REM sleep afterwards, the deprived cats could be picked out from normal animals later: they were "old, tired cats." Animals who were deprived of REM sleep for long periods of time acted as if their basic drives were intensified; they ate abnormally large amounts, were restless, and were indiscriminately hyper-sexual. If a man acted the way these cats did, he would have to be placed in a mental institution.

Indeed, one of the first signs in many mental illnesses is sleep disturbance. Alcohol, amphetamines and barbiturates all repress REM sleep. Are the hallucinations of alcoholism and the psychoses associated with prolonged use of these drugs efforts to make up for lost REM sleep?

There is no doubt that animals - all the way down to the rat and the opossum - have REM sleep, and that in humans REM sleep is always accompanied by dreaming. Does this necessarily mean that animals are really dreaming? Eldo really can't tell us whether he's seeing anything, but there is suggestive evidence.

Dr. Charles J. Vaughn, of the University of Pittsburgh, trained Rhesus monkeys, kept in isolated surroundings, to press a bar when they received a visual stimulus. Monkeys trained this way were found to press the bar in the same manner during REM sleep, indicating that they were "seeing" something.

Newborn kittens spend most of their time in REM sleep, and the same thing has been found in humans. Dr. Arthur Parmelee at UCLA has found that premature human infants spend more of their time in REM sleep than do infants born at term, and that the more premature the baby, the more time spent in REM sleep. Further, as the baby matures, the amount of REM sleep decreased.

Can these premature infants really be dreaming? The answers aren't all in, but it seems likely that this brain wave activity may be nature's way of preparing the infant, even while still in the womb, to receive the impressions of the outside world.

What may prove to be one of the most intense discussions on local affairs in Andover's history

River Pollution Ended
The Famed Salmon Runs

The Fourth of July period recalls the days when salmon and peas were traditional.

The salmon and pea combination became universal because it was a poor man's fare that all could afford. It compares to the Scotsman's inedible haggis choked down on St. Andrew's Day, although it is decidedly more savory.

So, despite the price one must pay for Atlantic salmon in the market today, salmon and peas were the poverty foods of colonial New England. The Atlantic salmon ran up every coastal river in New England, from the Housatonic in Connecticut northward along the coast to Labrador.

The fish furnished such cheap and readily-available protein that colonial employers tried to feed their hired help no other meat. Salmon became such an abuse of the appetite that bond servants began specifying in their contracts that they did not have to eat salmon more often than twice a week.

Commercial fishing for Atlantic salmon is forbidden today in all United States rivers. The legal restriction largely is theoretical for there are no Atlantic salmon in any New England streams, except for a few small runs in Maine. The last great river supporting sport fishing for Salmon was the Penobscot, famed for its Bangor pool. But, shortly before world War II pollution had ended Penobscot salmon fishing in all but theory.

Maine had the last state-wide sport salmon fishery, until shortly after the Civil War. Today it is the only American state within the salmon's natural range that is had an unexpected beginning at the final meeting of the school year of the local school committee when a group of six Andover residents registered their opposition to the recently perfected though not finally adopted plan for the religious education of school children here. The sponsors of the plan for a weekday school for religious education are the clergy of all the Andover churches.

Mr. and Mrs. William D. McIntyre of Andover Street are rejoicing over the birth of a baby boy, John Albins.

10 Years Ago - July, 1957

The Taxpayers Assn. has condemned the water restrictions imposing anything to restore this once great resource.

The most recent and promising development in Maine is the agreement made in April between the U.S. Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife and the State of Maine to construct improved fishways over six Penobscot River dams and to clean pollution from the river. Restoration of a salmon run is scheduled to begin in 1970.

A recent pious denunciation of commercial salmon fishing in the sea off Iceland - where both North America and European Atlantic salmon feed - had some validity but overlooked the fact that the reason salmon cannot withstand commercial fishing lies in the pollution of our streams which have denied them access to traditional spawning beds.

Salmon require water of almost drinkable purity. They are agile fish and can leap waterfalls or dams 10 feet high - but dams without fishways have been built higher than that along salmon streams. The reason Atlantic salmon run up streams is because they lay eggs only in freshwater.

Before dams and pollution blocked salmon migrations, the Connecticut River was the most famous salmon stream in North America. It gave salmon access to smaller tributaries as far north as Colebrook, N.H. The Merrimack River also was famous. It permitted salmon to migrate into the White Mountains and become common fish in the Pemigewasset, Baker's and Contoocook Rivers.

Even such docile streams as the Concord River in Massachusetts had their salmon runs.

Treasures Exhibited

Treasure hunters - see European masterpieces from the 15th to 18th centuries in the new Museum of Fine Arts Hidden Treasures exhibition now through September 3 in galleries DD.

Thirty paintings by such masters as Domenico Tintoretto and Thomas Gainsborough selected from the museum's crowded storage rooms dramatize the need for additional gallery space and illustrate the richness of the museum's collection of European masterworks. Called "Old Master Paintings," it is the second in a series of Hidden Treasures exhibitions.

Included is an extraordinary trove of three Spanish medieval altar-pieces which highlight the selection of important gilded paintings from the Middle Ages.

Italian painting dominates the section devoted to Renaissance art, as it dominated the European art scene during the 15th century. Domenico Tintoretto's "Adoration of the Magi" - one of the world's great paintings - represents 16th century Italian Mannerism.

Dutch art of the 17th century - often called Holland's Golden Age - is richly represented by six works, including a magnificent painting of a schoolteacher with his pupils by Aert de Gelder and an interior by Emmanuel de Witte. Another 17th century painting of particular interest is a "Still Life" by the Flemish master Frans Snyder, who often painted the animals and still-life portions in Rubens's large works.

A favorite portraitist of 18th century England, Thomas Gainsborough, is represented in the exhibition by two portraits, including his elegant painting of Lady Pleydell.

PLAIN
FANCY

The two words are inadequate. We use them to make a point. The saying goes that some people like plain furnishings in their homes while others lean to the fancy.

Regardless of your preference... the "plain" lines of Contemporary... the conservative approach to decor; or the "fancy" of the celebrated periods... even to the rococo in decor, you'll find them expressed best at the Studio Shoppe. We are a house of ideas - the ordinary is taboo! And, our prices always mean a saving to you.

It's a combination you can't beat. Come and see.

Twirlers Dance In Philly

Twenty-one teen square dancers from this community, members of the Twilight Twirlers Square Dance Club of Andover, were with the 35 young people from this area who attended the 16th National Square Dance Convention in Philadelphia last weekend.

The convention attracted more than 15,000 to the Philadelphia Civic Center for dancing to the lead of callers from throughout the United States. Among those participating as a caller and master of ceremonies was Robert Baillie of 5 Ayer St., caller for the Twilight Twirlers.

The teens were treated to swimming in the University of Pennsylvania pool each morning, square dancing all day and after-parties in the hotel ballrooms where they stayed. There was also time for visits to historic landmarks. On the final evening, a concert was given by four of the famed Philadelphia Mummers String Bands.

The Twilight Twirlers financed their trip by changing license plates and by selling candy house-to-house and at dances sponsored by adult dance groups in the Merrimack Valley.

Members from Andover who attended were: Ann Danforth, Cindy Gaudet, Karol Klempa, Pam Darby, Mike Bergeron, Bill Hemsworth, Chuck Pfaff, Jean Spencer, Marge Rockwood, Jan Stewart, Steve Piercy, Lee Patterson, Brenda Jackson, Dianne Hayes, Doug Hayman, Dave Thompson, Biff Park, Dick Arsenault, Donna Gulezian, Georgia Anderson, Wayne Thompson and adult advisors, Mr. and Mrs. Willard H. Patterson.

Others attending were Jan Pan, Lyn Doherty, Joanne Jackson, Marietta Pomerleau, Marguerite Minardi, Jan Sawyer, Cindy Gattill, Marilyn Proudfoot, Bill Sawyer, Tom Meyer, Andy Hildebrandt, John Jackson, Stan Dzierzalka, Mike McHale and financial advisor, Mrs. John Jackson.

MISS Karla Elizabeth Marie Haartz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Karl J. C. Haartz, 60 High Plain Rd., graduated at the 130th commencement exercises of Mount Holyoke College June 4. Miss Haartz is a graduate also of Abbot Academy.

Peace Corps Examination

Andover residents interested in helping the people of developing nations to help themselves have been invited to take the Peace Corps Placement Test at 1:30 p.m. on Saturday, July 15 at the Lawrence post office.

The test measures general aptitude and the ability to learn a foreign language, not education or achievement. It is given to determine where and how an applicant will be happiest and best utilized overseas. The test requires no preparation and is non-competitive; an applicant can neither pass nor fail. The test takes about one hour and a half.

The application form, available from local post offices or from the Peace Corps in Washington, D.C. 20525, is the most important factor in the selection of Volunteers. Over 15,000 Peace Corps Volunteers are now at work in 53 developing nations. They come from every conceivable background, but are united in their efforts to improve the food production, health, education and life of the millions whose governments have asked the Peace Corps to help.

Ideal Time To Call The Martin Oil Co. For Repairs.

Martin Oil Company, located at 39 Oakland Avenue in Methuen, suggests that now is an ideal time to have your heating system checked and cleaned and replace old, leaking radiators. During the summer months when your heating system is not in use, it's a good time to put it in top working order or perhaps remodel your entire system. Martin Oil Company offers a complete oil heating service for you. They are qualified to install all types of heating systems, including hot water, steam and forced hot air. Their heating experts will come to your home at no obligation and give you a free heating survey. If you are losing heat up the chimney or have any complaint about high heating bills, call Martin Oil Company. They remodel all old systems and convert them to new, and all the work is done by their own men. You have a complete job, from start to finish, by one local company. Martin Oil Company is a franchised dealer for Iron Fireman Oil burners. The Iron Fireman Company has spent a half million dollars and five years to perfect its unique Jet-Head firing head, which creates a very low stack temperature. This means that a minimum of heated gas is going up your chimney, so you have less wasted heat. The Iron Fireman has a four-inch smoke pipe, instead of the usual seven or eight inch, and features an induced draft. Therefore, if you have an old heating system and you have Martin Oil Company install a new Iron Fireman, you are guaranteed a saving of 30 per cent on your heating cost in the heating season ahead. Martin Oil Company was started in 1937 by Arthur Martin and is now owned by his son, Francis Martin. This is a local business run by local people. So before it is time to start using your heating system, consider the saving and the clean, smokeless and sootless heat known as "white glove heat" that an Iron Fireman furnace can give you. For your free heating survey or for 24-hour service next winter, call Martin Oil Company soon at 682-7577.

Memorial Hall Library

Summer Reading Club

Monday morning 14 boys and girls were waiting for the Children's room at Memorial Hall Library to open. They were the first to register for the Summer Reading Club and among them took home 100 books with only a little help from a few youngsters who were in for other reading. Over 40 joined the Club the first day.

Registrations are still being taken for the summer reading program. Ask the librarian in the Children's Room at the main library or at the branch library on Center Street in the Ballardvale Community House. The program is open to boys and girls who have completed any one of the elementary school grades.

Vacations

On vacation this week are Miss Elizabeth Russell who is midway in a trip abroad, Clarence Johnson, custodian; Mrs. Thomas Johnson, desk staff; Mrs. Kenneth Vint, assistant librarian; Mrs. John Wilson, circulation head.

The library is fortunate to have summer assistance from college students Lynne Anderson and Mary Alice McQuade. Both were on the page staff when they went to Andover High School.

Exhibits

Vacation Reading books available for an extended loan period are now on display for adults and also for children in the Children's Room. To qualify for the loan period which runs until September 15, a book must be a year old and must not appear on any reading list. Ask the librarian to show you such books if the extended period will be of use to you.

Other exhibits in the Adult Department are artifacts and books on the theme of Greece. Miss Miriam Putnam brought the former back from her recent trip to Greece, Turkey and England. The books are available for circulation. Location Main Reading Room near the desk.

New books for men have been added to the display "Main Street

David T. Noyes At Fort Benning

David T. Noyes, 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Noyes, Burnham Road, is attending Army Reserve Officer's Training Corps basic camp at Ft. Benning, Ga., which began June 11.

Noyes is a student at Salem State College. He is attempting to earn an Army commission through the new two-year ROTC program.

He is receiving six weeks of training similar to that given all Army basic trainees, including rifle marksmanship, bayonet training, hand-to-hand combat and first aid.

Successful completion of the basic camp will qualify him for the Advanced Corps at the college. The two years of advanced training at the school and advanced summer camp emphasize skills necessary to command. He will be eligible for a commission as a second lieutenant in the U.S. Army upon graduation from college.

Charity begins at home, if and when it begins.

Business." The collection covers various aspects of business and money such as management, investment, insurance, production, distribution, Wall Street and the market. The display and a booklist are in the Main Reading Room at the entrance to the periodical alcove.

Also in the Main Reading room but near the Young Adult corner are anthologies of poetry selected by members of Mrs. Marian Chittim's 9th grade English students at Andover Junior High School. The young people selected poetry which appealed to them, wrote biographies and criticisms and then put their anthologies together in binders with table of contents and bibliography. The only illustrations permitted were things they cut from magazines they bought or had at home, or original art. Most show both kinds of decoration.
